An institutional newsletter plays a pivotal role not only in documenting various activities undertaken by the institution, but also in staying connected to the extended community outside its campus. A newsletter is the most feasible medium to update college related news and information. While the prospectus or the website may be too bulky with too many details, a newsletter is very specific and concise.

Students, teachers and non-teaching staff of Nalbari College are sincerely engaged in different types of academic and co-curricular activities round the year, that contributes to the value added teaching-learning process. The IQAC of Nalbari College has always been initiating and encouraging such type of activities. A well-designed and colourful newsletter will further boost this multi-pronged teaching-learning network by documenting and updating the endeavours and achievements of the college community. With this anticipation, IQAC, Nalbari College is publishing the first issue of the college newsletter.
