Resource person: Mr. Robin Rabha a local tourist guide/Trakker and the caretaker of the forest dept eco-tourism project called ZAZABOR.

About the Programme: Jungle Surviving & Trekking Camp was organized in keeping view to promote life skills and leadership qualities among the students of Physical Education of Nalbari College. destination peak sticking out of a cliff, around 2,000 feet from sea level, which got a geological survey of India's "Unique Physiographic Entity for Eco-Tourism Site" tag last year, is located on the outskirts of Bongaigaon district and around 20 km south of the New Bongaigaon railway station. With its stunning natural beauty and the breathtaking view of the surrounding valley, the peak has become a popular place for nature lovers and trekkers. The peak located near the Dewangaon and Rabha Para villages has yet to grab attention outside the state. The trek is a strenuous climb of about 4 hours. The trekkers need to cross a river called Tuniya that flows by the Nakkati's side before trekking on the terrain covered with dense forest,"

Mr. Robin Rabha a local tourist guide and the caretaker of the forest dept eco-tourism project called "ZAZABOR" played a vital role in educating the student about the programme. The students of Physical Education of Nalbari College got full exposure during their two days of the Nature attachments programme.
